

Harness 75 years of experience helping educators, students, and parents close the learning gap for children with dyslexia

Dyslexia Awareness Professional Learning

95% satisfaction rate from 4,000+ educators

Learning Ally is a trusted nonprofit of 75 years, immersed in the lives of students with reading differences

Understand students with dyslexia and how to build a culture that supports them

Less than 20% of general education teachers feel “very well prepared” to teach students with mild to moderate learning disabilities. Yet in every US classroom, about 1 in 5 students deals with the impact of dyslexia and never receive the instruction necessary to succeed in school and beyond.

Flexible and efficient implementation options enhanced by Communities of Practice

- Builds foundational knowledge and understanding using a powerful dyslexia simulation
- Identifies common characteristics of dyslexia
- Provides targeted instructional practices and high-value accommodations

Meets state dyslexia training requirements affordably

I really liked the explicit examples of specific ways to help students with dyslexia in ways that are efficient for teachers and easy to implement..”

Supporting Striving Readers at Home

To help families better understand the challenges their children face, the key foundations students need to succeed in reading, and how they can provide effective support at home, Learning Ally partners with districts to offer a one-hour, interactive session delivered virtually by an expert facilitator.

This session is designed for all families, including multilingual speakers, whose children have dyslexia, face learning challenges, or are simply struggling to read.
